OUR MISSION

The Center for Reproductive Rights uses the power of law to advance reproductive rights as fundamental human rights around the world.

OUR VISION

We envision a world where every person participates with dignity as an equal member of society, regardless of gender; where every woman is free to decide whether or when to have children and whether to get married; where access to quality reproductive health care is guaranteed; and where every woman can make these decisions free from coercion or discrimination.

From the President and the Board Chair

We thank you for being with us during this tumultuous period in our history.

In the face of powerful regressive forces, in 2021 we achieved historic victories to strengthen reproductive rights as fundamental human rights around the world—from Chile to Nepal to Tanzania and beyond. Even as we celebrated these successes, we fought back in the United States against the most intense attacks on abortion rights in decades and argued two major cases before the U.S. Supreme Court.

As we look ahead to a future that is sure to bring new opportunities and new challenges, we remain undaunted and unwavering in our commitment to build, enforce, and defend legal protections for reproductive rights. We are in this for the long-term—as we have been for almost 30 years, and as we will be for decades to come.

The generosity, commitment, and confidence of our partners and supporters make our work possible, and we could not be more grateful.

Fighting Abortion Regression in the U.S.

The United States faces significant retrogression in access to abortion, as the U.S. Supreme Court considers overturning 50 years of precedent protecting abortion rights and state lawmakers continue to enact extreme bans and harmful restrictions.

We continue to seek justice against Texas’s blatantly unconstitutional law banning abortion after just six weeks of pregnancy and its “vigilante” scheme incentivizing individuals to sue abortion providers and others. The U.S. Supreme Court’s refusal to block the law ended most abortion access in the state and forced Texans to travel to neighboring states or carry their pregnancies to term against their will.

Representing the last remaining abortion clinic in Mississippi, Jackson Women’s Health Organization, we argued the most consequential abortion rights case in generations—marking the first time the U.S. Supreme Court is considering the constitutionality of a pre-viability abortion ban since Roe v. Wade. If the Court upholds Mississippi’s 15-week abortion ban and overrules Roe, nearly half the U.S. states are poised to ban abortion.

In a historic first step, the U.S. House of Representatives passed the Women’s Health Protection Act (WHPA), federal legislation to protect the right to access abortion care nationwide. With our partners, we will continue to build on our decade-long advocacy to enact WHPA into law and fight on all fronts to ensure abortion access across the states.

“Allowing a state to take control of a woman’s body...is a fundamental deprivation of her liberty.”

Chile Agrees to End Forced Sterilization Practices

After more than a decade of litigation, the Chilean government agreed to provide reparations to Francisca, a woman forcibly sterilized because of her HIV-positive status, and adopt measures to guarantee free, prior, and informed consent before a surgical sterilization. In 2002, Francisca was sterilized without her knowledge or consent after the delivery of her son by doctors who decided it would be “irresponsible” for an HIV-positive woman to have more children.

We have been fighting for Francisca since 2009, when we and our local partner Vivo Positivo brought her case before the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights after an earlier criminal complaint against the surgeon was dismissed by the Chilean justice system. With this victory, the government of Chile is required to provide full reparations to Francisca and her son and to implement policies to guarantee reproductive rights as human rights without discrimination.

“I am relieved that after so many years of negotiation we now have this agreement, which will help ensure that no other woman experiences the trauma that I went through.”

Ending Tanzania's Discriminatory Expulsion of Pregnant Schoolgirls

Tanzania's Minister of Education announced an end to the oppressive practice of barring pregnant girls and adolescent mothers from school, after a decade of advocacy by a diverse coalition of partners. For years, the Tanzanian government has forced public schoolgirls to undergo pregnancy testing and has permanently expelled them if pregnant, denying girls the opportunity to complete their formal education. By ending this regressive practice, Tanzania will be fulfilling its obligations under its constitution and to multiple regional and international human rights instruments.

Just days before the Minister of Education announced this policy change, we joined our Tanzanian partner, Legal and Human Rights Centre, to argue a case before the African Committee of Experts on the Rights and Welfare of the Child on behalf of six Tanzanian girls who were expelled from school for being pregnant. We will continue to pursue the case to ensure this change is lasting and permanent.

“While this verbal announcement by the Minister for Education demonstrates political goodwill towards ending systemic exclusion and discrimination of schoolgirls within Tanzania's school system, it must be backed by written policy or guidelines, if not the law. In practice, this means public schools in Tanzania must stop expelling pregnant girls and start admitting adolescents.”

Decriminalizing Abortion in Nepal

After our more than 20 years of advocacy with our Nepal-based partners, the government of Nepal agreed to decriminalize abortion. The move came with Nepal's acceptance of recommendations from the Universal Periodic Review (UPR) before the United Nations Human Rights Council (HRC)—a comprehensive human rights review that takes place for each country usually every four years.

“Acceptance of the UPR recommendations is a key milestone in our efforts to decriminalize abortion and advance reproductive rights as human rights in Nepal.”

In advance of the review, we, along with our partners, the Forum for Women Law and Development (FWLD) and Justice and Rights Institute-Nepal, made a joint submission to the UPR mechanism focused on the legal and procedural barriers to accessing safe abortion services in Nepal. This new commitment by the government is a crucial step toward removing abortion from the country's penal laws. We look forward to working with our partners and to holding government officials in Nepal accountable to their commitment to fully and effectively implement these recommendations.

European Union Calls for Removal of all Barriers to Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights

The European Parliament passed a new resolution affirming that sexual and reproductive health and rights (SRHR) are fundamental human rights that must be upheld across the region. It's the first SRHR resolution passed by the Parliament in nearly 20 years, and it provides recommendations for European Union (EU) Member States to ensure that national laws, policies and practices guarantee that all people have access to the full range of reproductive health care—including abortion, contraception, high-quality maternal health care, assisted reproductive technologies, and comprehensive sexuality education. The resolution also called for robust action to counter threats of regression affecting SRHR.

“This important resolution demonstrates the EU’s strong commitment to advancing gender equality and SRHR. Regressive threats to sexual and reproductive rights are increasing in many member states — so it’s critical that EU institutions condemn this regression and take robust action to protect these rights.”

KATRINE THOMASEN

Associate Director for Europe, Center for Reproductive Rights

We work with a broad group of stakeholders to promote SRHR across the region, and we provided resources and support to members of the European Parliament leading on this initiative. The adopted resolution cites our World Abortion Laws Map in its discussion of laws on abortion globally and in the EU that still fall short and fail to protect reproductive rights.
